

Safe Management at International Events

Safe Management at International Events is a two day course aimed at a broad range of delegates from crew supervisors working on the event floor up to event managers working either for the venue or the event organiser. The aim is to give the delegates basic training on how to look after their own safety and how to cooperate with the venue, the organiser and appointed health and safety officials in ensuring the safety of everyone else. This is augmented on the second day with an overview of their wider responsibilities relevant to their level and in particular how to conduct an event risk assessment in line with best practice guidance accepted by the leading event companies.

Costs

- Long haul (from UK) £2,500 plus £100 per delegate
- UK & Europe £1,800 plus £100 per delegate

The costs are based on the client providing the training facilities including printing the g-Guide locally and excludes all travel and accommodation costs for the trainer which will be charged at cost.

The g-Guide and Certification

- Module 1 - Why Health and Safety is Important
